

Governor's Weekly Message: Honoring Those Who Serve and Protect

DOVER – In his weekly message, filmed at the Delaware State Police Museum, Governor Markell stresses the importance of honoring the men and women in law enforcement who have sacrificed their lives while serving their State.

“Every day law enforcement officers across our state put themselves at risk to protect us and keep us safe. We must never take their service for granted,” said Governor Markell. “By taking action to support our law enforcement and by keeping alive the memories of Delaware officers who have been killed in the line of duty, we inspire new generations to serve, and we keep Delaware moving forward.”

Every week, the Governor's office releases a new Weekly Message in video, audio, and transcript form. The message is available on:
