DSHA Residents Celebrate Healthy Homes Launch

October 15, 2014 – (Dover, DE) – Residents of the Liberty Court community in Dover joined Delaware State Housing Authority (DSHA) Director Anas Ben Addi, Sherani Patterson, Population Health Manager at Nemours, and Cassandra Codes-Johnson, Delaware Division of Public Health's Director of Community Health to celebrate the kick-off of the Healthy Homes Initiative. Dover Mayor Robin Christiansen, Senator Brian Bushweller, and Representative Darryl Scott were also on hand for the festivities. The initiative promotes Safe Cleaning, which is designed to reduce asthma-related hospitalization by educating residents on asthma awareness, safe cleaning techniques, and pest management. The event featured face-painting for the children, refreshments, and the 4-H Club distributed raffle tickets for door prizes.

“A healthy home is important, especially for children who may be more susceptible to illness,” said Director Ben Addi. “DSHA’s mission is providing opportunities for safe, affordable housing. Part of that mission includes promoting healthy homes, and this training will give the families the tools they need to create and maintain an environment free of common contaminants. We want the children to learn healthy habits so they can pass them down to their children.”

“As a grant supporting partner with Nemours, the Delaware Division of Public Health’s Office of Healthy Environments provides Nemours staff and their community partners consultation, education, and outreach on practical methods to reduce environmental triggers of asthma, such as comprehensive training for Nemours’ personnel associated with this project and for Nemours’ medical and community partners. We congratulate the Delaware State Housing Authority on this initiative and look forward to working with you in the future,” added Cassandra Codes-Johnson.
